Mud Creek Slide, State Route 1, Monterey County

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- An upper level high pressure system over California will continue to strengthen and expand westward producing widespread triple digit heat to portions of the interior and desert southwest.
- Dangerous warning level and Gusty sundowner winds will develop over portions of Sothern California Coast, especially, near the foothills of the Santa Barbara South Coast.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

- http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php - Temporarily unavailable.
- <https://alerts-v2.weather.gov/counties/CA>

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Strong high pressure over the Great Basin will produce another very hot and dry day across the North Ops region again today. Thunderstorms are expected to remain to our south and east. SW-NW winds will gust to 25 mph over the higher terrain in the east and in coastal regions, with the exception of the east Bay Area and delta region where gusts to 35 mph are possible. Tonight and early Sunday dry offshore winds will gust to 30 mph over the higher terrain in Del Norte County.

The high will shift southeast on Sunday and allow a Pacific low pressure trough to reach the northern CA coast and the Pacific NW. The trough will move slowly northeast, exiting the region by early Wednesday. Isolated showers and thunderstorms are possible in far northern areas Sunday through Tuesday. The trough will also bring a slight cooling trend and stronger winds, with SW gusts to 30 mph in northern and eastern areas.

The high will build back over the Great Basin late in the week and bring a return to very hot and dry weather. However, there will be a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms in far eastern and northern areas each day.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

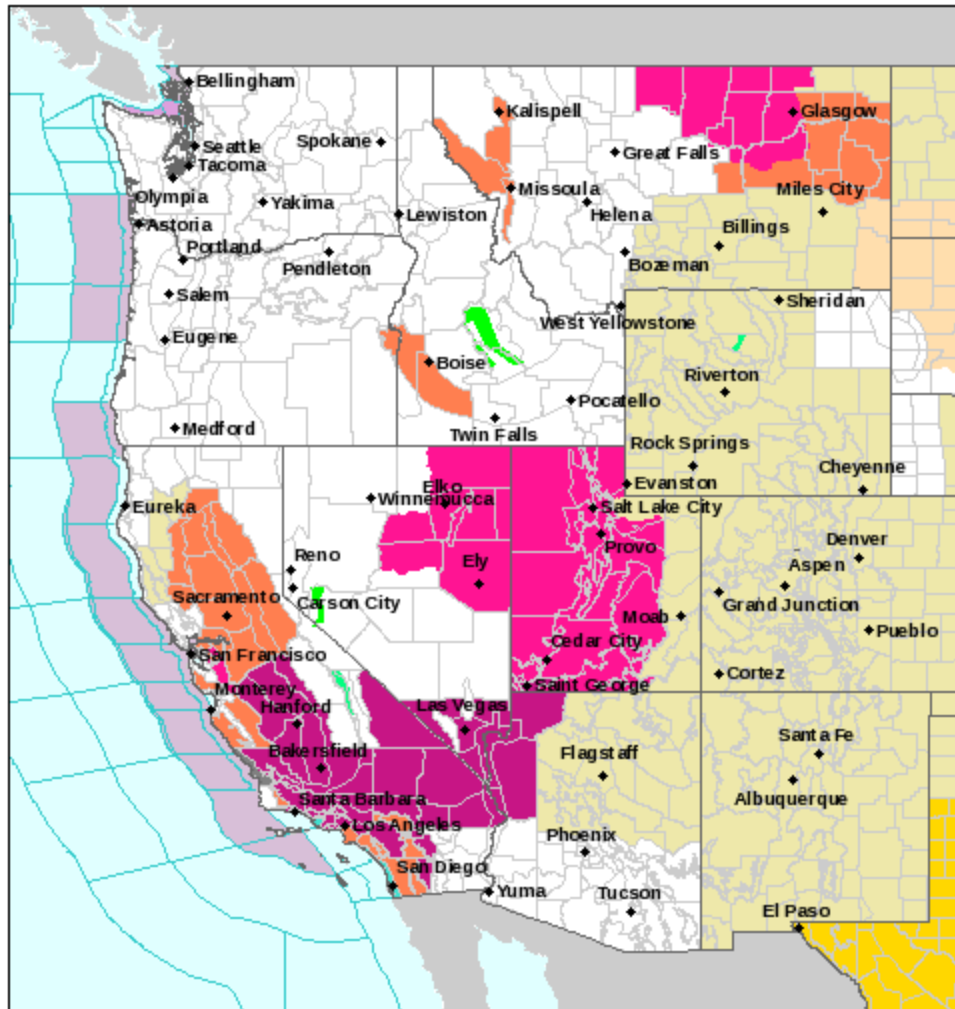

Thunderstorms increasing this weekend becoming isolated Monday through Wednesday

Record heat today

Thunderstorm activity will increase over the mountains and deserts through Sunday as moisture increases in the southeast flow around high pressure centered over the Southwestern States. Some thunderstorms will be on the dry side today, but they will become wetter on Sunday. A weak disturbance in the flow may bring some shower and thunderstorm activity to the coastal and valley locations of Southern California tonight through Sunday night. There will be little change in the record heat today, with upper 80s and 90s across the mountains and 100 to 112 in the valleys. Minimum humidity will remain between 12% and 25% today. Temperatures will drop around 10 degrees Sunday away from the immediate coast and San Joaquin Valley as the strong high weakens. Temperatures will then cool a couple degrees each day Monday through Wednesday. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 15% and 30% Sunday through the middle of next week. Thunderstorm activity will become isolated and confined to the mountains and deserts Monday and then only isolated afternoon thunderstorms are expected over the Sierra Tuesday and Wednesday. High pressure will strengthen and shift west once again late next week bringing a return of hot conditions. There will most likely be no thunderstorm activity on Thursday before thunderstorms return to the mountains and deserts Friday. There will be westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph across the wind prone desert areas each afternoon and evening through the middle of next week.
